Along the Canadian National Highway eastward, the natural and pristine Lower Mainland of Greater Vancouver is filled with fertile and green farmland. After leaving the first stop in Greater Vancouver, we came to Hope Town, an important town during the gold rush period. It is also the filming location for "First Blood" and more than ten Hollywood movies. Many scenes are similar. Princeton and Pinkerton are both the fruit towns in southeastern British Columbia. As apples grow there, you can see fruitful fruits everywhere in the Okanagan Lakes region, such as apricots, peaches, plums, cherries, etc. In the summer, sunbathers, or tourists interested in windsurfing, kiteboarding, or surfing, choose to come to Pinkerton in an endless stream. Colonna is the largest and most distinctive Shangri-La beautiful city in the interior outside Greater Vancouver. In addition to good mountains, good water, and beautiful scenery, there are also many well-known ice wineries located here. It is also the hometown of water monsters.

Colonna and Vernon are both fruit and agricultural product producing areas. Due to ecological environment factors and good living conditions, they have been rated as one of the top ten livable cities in Canada in recent years. Secamus is the houseboat capital of Canada and the intersection of the two lakes. In the summer, lovers of water sports from all over the world come here to vacation. The last nail is where the Pacific Railway Company completed the final work on the East-West Railway more than a hundred years ago. It reminds people of those Chinese workers who devoted their efforts and sacrificed their lives despite hardships. Coming to Rogers Gap Pass means entering the range of the Rocky Mountains. The mountains, steep slopes and curves stretch continuously, along with railways and highways, and you need to pass through eight snow tunnels to leave this pass. Not long after passing through Golden Town, we arrived at Emerald Lake in Yoho National Park. There are resort villas nestled in this lake, and the scenery of the lake and mountains makes it even more warm and peaceful, and the scenery is pleasant.

When leaving Yoho National Park, we entered Banff National Park in Alberta. It is the earliest and first established national park in Canada. There are many beautiful scenery and magnificent mountains in the park. Castle Mountain is the most typical representative of the famous mountain. There is a canyon at the foot of the mountain, with waterfalls above and below, and the gurgling water is extremely clear. Banff is a century-old tourist attraction and the highest tourist attraction in the world. There are a dazzling array of attractive exquisite products and a variety of delicacies and snacks, which are exciting. The scene of Bow River Falls was an important background in Marilyn Monroe's famous movie "The River", which often makes people recall that time. From Surprise Point, you can fully see the momentum of the forest castle in the mountains. Lake Minnewanka was called Fairy Water in Indian times. The lake is long and deep, and is the second longest lake in the Rocky Mountains. It also has a dam and hydropower to meet the power needs of the Banff area. It is picturesque in all seasons. The scenery of the ten peaks of Moraine Lake was used to create the background application of the Canadian dollar twenty. Lake Louise is known as the sapphire of the Rocky Mountains, which shows how rare its scenery is.

When exploring lakes in the Rocky Mountains, it is easy to see calmer waters with reflections reflected in the lakes. Although Bow Lake is located on the roadside, it can sometimes show jaw-dropping beauty. The blue color of Bi Tou Lake is indescribable, so bright and radiant. The scenery of the Columbia Icefield is a relic of the post-glacial period and is truly one of the world's rarest sights. In the upper reaches of the Athabasca Glacier, it is sometimes possible to sample tens of thousands of years of glacier water. It is said to have its own unique sweetness. When we visit here, we will understand even more the saying that when you drink water, think about its source. It is indeed where the source of water is, the Great Dividing Range. The water of Atabasca Falls is also flowed into it by glacial water, making it majestic and surging, like thousands of horses galloping. There you can absorb the most and strongest negative ions and the freshest, natural and pure air, which is really relaxing for your body and mind.

Many wild animals are often found nearby, such as grizzly bears, black bears, white-tailed deer, elk, wolves, goats, marmots, etc. Maligne Lake is the most beautiful and artistic lake in the Rocky Mountains. It is a high-altitude deep-water lake. There is a spiritual island in the lake, and you can take a cruise to wander among the mountains and rivers. Pyramid Lake is the heart of Jasper, shaped like a kidney, and is a prime spot for canoeing and picnicking. Mount Robertson is the highest point in the Rocky Mountains and is shrouded in mystery all year round. Wells Gray Provincial Park is the second largest park in British Columbia. Most of its terrain is canyon-shaped. It was carved by nature during the volcanic and glacial periods, creating many waterfalls. Therefore, it is also known as Waterfall Park. Walk in the ancient forest and enjoy the spectacular scenery that is as natural as a miraculous workmanship. The Manlu region is the best producer of American ginseng in Canada. We can visit the American ginseng factory and taste American ginseng tea and various products. Due to the special terrain and extremely special climate here, both hot and cold climates are rare and the drainage is good, which is very conducive to the growth of American ginseng and the cultivation of the best quality products.
