Itinerary outline

Away from the hustle and bustle of the city, immerse yourself in the fragrance of tea and natural phytoncides, letting your worries and anxiety disappear.

Starting from the tea aroma tour in Pinglin, follow the tea garden owner to visit the tea garden and explain the tea making process, then calm down and enjoy the time of tea tasting.

Later, enjoy the magnificent scenery of Qiandao Lake and the seemingly endless tea garden terraces.

Are you hungry? Next, head to Shenkeng Old Street, which is most famous for its tofu delicacies. You can explore and find your favorite snacks.

After lunch, stroll along the Elephant Mountain Trail and enjoy the beautiful scenery of the urban forest. When you reach the top, you will be amazed by the vast Taipei city view in front of you.

Itinerary content

After meeting the tour guide, we headed to Pinglin, which is famous for growing Baozhong tea. The scenery along the way is beautiful and full of greenery. You can follow the scenery outside the window and slowly move your mood from the city to nature...

The first stop was Pinglin District, where Wenshan Baozhong tea was born. First, we visited the local tea gardens and tea factories with the tea garden owners to learn about the production and production process of Taiwanese tea. Then go to the tea house, where you will learn about tea tasting and Taiwanese tea culture under the guidance of a tea master. They will also demonstrate how to brew a pot of good tea, and enjoy the delicious taste of Taiwanese tea together.

Afterwards, drive to Shiding. This "Thousand Island Lake" with the same name as the famous scenic spot in Hangzhou, Zhejiang Province, China, was originally an inhabited village. It was submerged due to the accumulation of water during the construction of the Jade Reservoir. As the lake water gradually rose, it covered the original rolling mountains, forming a pond with countless lake islands intertwined. It was named because the scenery resembles the beautiful scenery of Zhejiang's Thousand Island Lake.

Its unique geographical location and pleasant climate have nourished the tea gardens around Feicui Reservoir, giving birth to Taiwan's top ten famous teas "Wenshan Baozhong" and "Oriental Beauty". In addition, there is another popular scenic spot not far away. The rows of tea carpets planted neatly from the top of the mountain look like a symbol of Bagua at first glance, so it is named "Bagua Tea Garden".

Later, we came to Shenkeng to visit the famous Tofu Street - Shenkeng Old Street. This is a good place for many people to spend time on weekends. It is famous for its "stinky tofu" which is equally famous for its smell and deliciousness. Various cooking methods, including fried, baked, boiled or steamed, can be found here. Don't miss it if you are brave enough to try new things. But if you are not able to adapt to the smell, you might as well try some tofu ice cream, which is different from ordinary ice cream and has a rich bean flavor.

Finally, return to Taipei City, stroll along the Xiangshan Trail, digest some delicious food and relax. Elephant Mountain is the most famous of the Four Beast Mountains in the Taipei Basin. It is named because it looks like an elephant head. Here you have an excellent view of 101, overlooking the beautiful scenery of Taipei city, and fully experience the charm of Xiangshan.

On the return trip, you can choose to get off at Taipei Xinyi Business District (Taipei 101) and continue to experience the still-vibrant nightlife of Taipei, or return to the original meeting point and get off at MRT Zhongxiao Xinsheng Station to end this pleasant journey.
